

The Art of Coming Together

Being part of a community means being part of something bigger than yourself. It's where stories are shared, ideas take shape, and inspiration grows through the people around us. The best creations rarely happen alone. They are built together.

This shared belief brought East Indies Gin, AGUGN, and Sekarputi Sidhiawati together in a collaboration inspired by culture, craftsmanship, and the spirit of the Indonesian archipelago. Each brings a different perspective, but all are connected by the same appreciation for stories that deserve to be shared.

For AGUGN, storytelling begins with heritage. Through his signature Kundika series, he combines printmaking and ceramics with inspiration drawn from nature and Indonesian visual traditions. His work reflects a dialogue between the past and the present, showing how culture continues to evolve while staying connected to its roots.

While AGUGN draws inspiration from heritage and nature, Sekarputi finds inspiration in people and the relationships that shape us. Through her ceramic practice, she explores womanhood, personal growth, and the quiet strength found in community. To her, nothing meaningful is ever created alone.

Although their practices are different, AGUGN and Sekarputi share the same belief that creativity grows through connection. Between people, traditions, and the stories that continue to be passed from one generation to the next.

That same spirit naturally resonates with East Indies Gin. Inspired by the richness of the Indonesian archipelago, every expression brings together local botanicals and the stories behind them. This collaboration extends that philosophy beyond the bottle, transforming shared values into pieces that celebrate creativity, culture, and community.

When asked about her favorite East Indies Gin expression, Sekarputi immediately chose Bali Pomelo. Its bright citrus notes and refreshing character make it a simple pleasure to enjoy over ice after a long day.

More than a collaboration, The Art of Coming Together is a celebration of the people, traditions, and shared experiences that bring us together. Because the most meaningful stories are never created alone.
